An African technology company focused on practical, security-conscious digital solutions.

Who we are

Mint Projects is a growing African technology company founded by Marshall Makoroni in 2025. It began after its founder noticed many businesses operating without suitable digital tools and relying on systems that did not provide the level of security and confidence they needed. That observation inspired a commitment to make practical, dependable and security-conscious technology easier for businesses to access.

What we do

Mint Projects brings together business software, software development, websites, automation and digital solutions. Its portfolio includes tools for retail operations, bookkeeping, finance and stock workflows, broader business management, service discovery and digital presence. Product capabilities and availability may vary by release and configuration; customers are encouraged to contact Mint Projects for current details.

Who we serve

Our intended customer community spans small and medium-sized businesses, larger organisations, schools, retailers, pharmacies, wholesalers, professionals and service providers. Mint Projects currently focuses on customers in Zimbabwe and South Africa, with an ambition to grow across Africa.

Our portfolio

MintQI System: retail operations, POS, quotations and invoicing.
MintBooks: bookkeeping and organised financial records.
Mint Advanced Suite: broader business management workflows.
Mint Finance: finance, stock and reporting workflows.
Mint Go: on-demand grooming and service discovery.

How we work

We start by understanding the business problem, the people who will use the solution and the workflow that needs improvement. Our guiding priorities are practical innovation, security-conscious design, user-friendly experiences, affordability and responsive support. We aim to communicate clearly about product capabilities, pricing, onboarding and ongoing assistance.

A message from our founder

Marshall Makoroni · Founder, Mint Projects

“I started Mint Projects because I saw too many businesses trying to grow and serve their customers without having the right tools, and too many relying on systems that did not give them the level of security and confidence they needed. I believed businesses deserved access to better technology: solutions that are useful, dependable, easier to work with and designed around real operational needs.”
